Leon Lanpher, convicted last June of stealing from his brother in Elmore and placed in charge of Probation Officer Stevens, is again in the toils. Recently Mr. Stevens received notice from Mrs. Simeon Richardson of West Albany that Lanpher, who had been boarding there, had left, taking an overcoat and five dollar gold piece. The money he had taken from a little bank belonging to her little grand-daughter. Lanpher was persistent in his denial. Mr. Stevens began an investigation and found that Lanpher had exchanged a five dollar gold piece at the Hardwick Savings Bank. Mr. Stevens and Sheriff Robbins went to Albany yesterday and upon thorough investigation became convinced that Lanpher was guilty and upon a hearing before the County Clerk a mittimus was made. The young man was turned over to the Sheriff and this morning Mr. Robbins took him to Rutland, where he will serve his sentence, which is not less than twelve nor more than eighteen months.

L. M. Hays, "the two-eyed man" of the Burlington Clipper, was up this way recently, and consequently he publishes the following in his syndicate list:—

The quarantine on cattle in New England is more sweeping than at first supposed. It has affected the business of the largest hide handling house in the country—that of ex-Gov. Page of Hyde Park. The shipping of hides out of Vermont has been brought, practically to a standstill, but it has not affected the buying. Gov. Page is buying hides the same as before the quarantine order. He told me the other day that he hoped and that it was his opinion, that the shipping restrictions would be removed before long. An interesting feature of the Governor's business the past few weeks has been the preparing for market of special skins which were sold to toy goods manufacturers, the skins going into the making of rocking horses and smaller articles for the boys and girls at holiday time. These special hides have been brought from all sections, the entire product of the Swifts at Kansas City and St. Joseph having been purchased to fill orders.

CAMPBELL REUNION.—The Campbell Reunion Society will hold its annual meeting Saturday, January 17, 1903, with Nathan Cobleigh in Hyde Park. All members will please take notice and govern themselves accordingly.
